FROM A STORY THAT COULD BE TRUE

Laughter reveals how stupidity, hate and fear of who is different, may affect the coexistence between different cultures and religions, determining grotesque dynamics but also very funny.

It's Good Friday. In Mariotto, a small town in the Apulia region (Southern Italy), everything is ready for the Way of the Cross but the interpreter of Jesus, the hairdresser Michele, has a sit on the crown of thorns. It is the beginning of the ordeal. The lighting technician, Jusuf, unknowingly sent into the fray by his pastor, replaces Michele in the role of Christ but he is a Muslim. The news cause a sensational reaction in the town and the public opinion of Mariotto splits in two. Jusuf, nicknamed Ameluk, in spite of himself, will be candidated for mayor in the local elections. Under a crossfire, with dramatic moments and hilarious situations, Ameluk will bring back the peace in the town.
